Adventure Mode

[Thread Update: I'm looking for Dwarf Fortress gamers to try my stable but-work-in-progress community layout for a controller. v0.61350 - Details below]

Hello, over a year ago I uploaded a thread about making a controller setup to assist with my physical disability which makes playing with keyboard and mouse very stressful and painful. I am back with the old year behind me, and a renaissance to play the games Adventure mode. I am really excited! I've got through Fortress mode with a Razer Kishi v2 and an Xbox controller, so now I'm taking a shot at tackling Adventure mode controls, using a controller.

The game isn't designed for controller. But consider this as an Unofficial support, for Adventure Mode. I want to make a decent as possible controller set up, to at least help cater other people like me, or anyone who would like to play using a controller.

Where to find this in Steam:

Connect a controller to Steam, go to Dwarf Fortress menu, locate the Controller Configuration button, go to Community Layout tab, and mine is here:

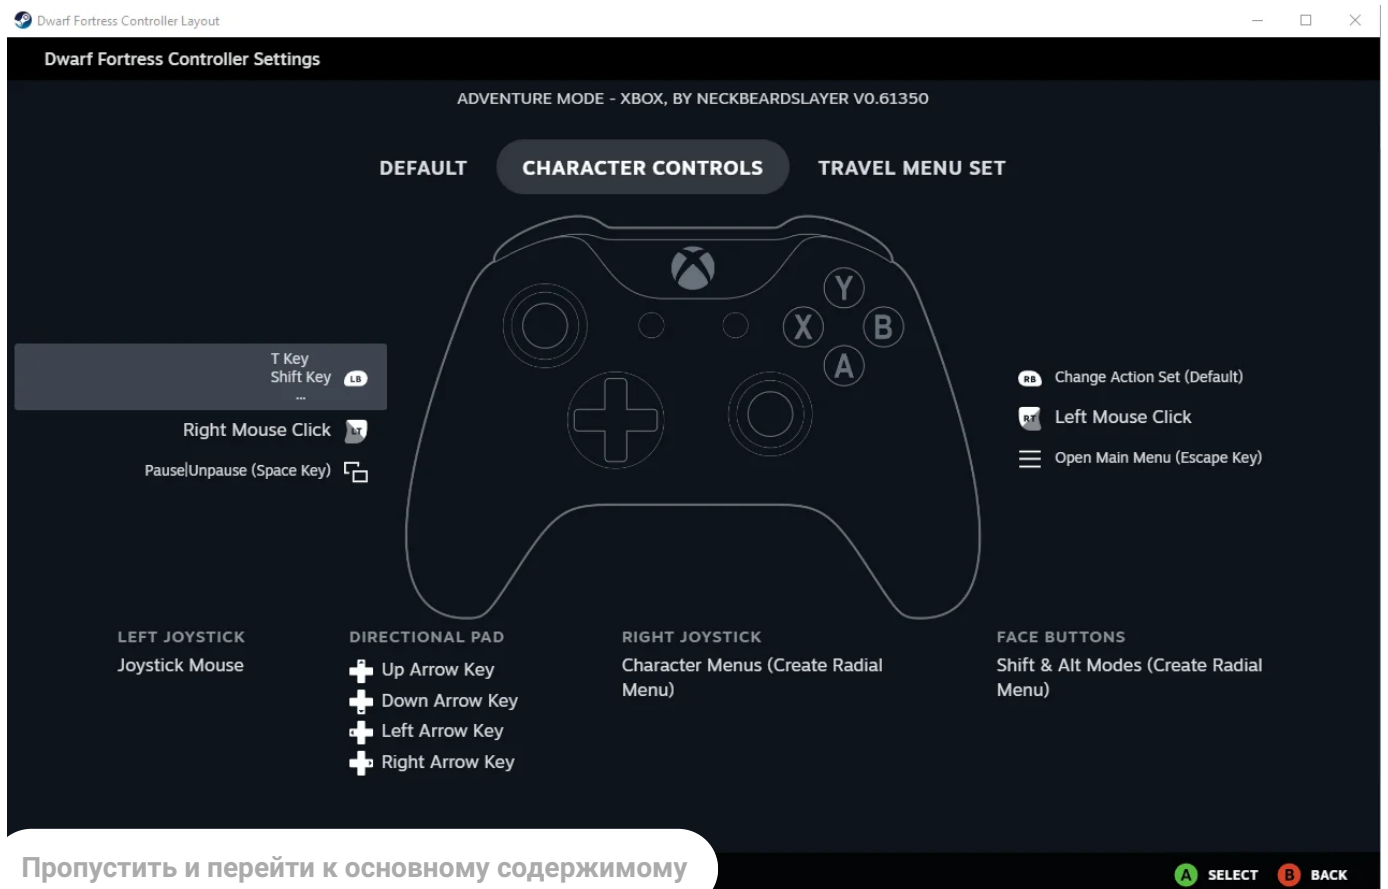

Community Layouts page can be found when you have Steam open and you connect a controller to your PC.

More details are below if you want to try it. Thanks if you do.

such as me not being able to tell the input fir keyboard to choose a lower case letter version instead of a capital letter

Maybe using SHIFT+letter as an input might work?

Is it possible for a visual cue to be seen when using a Mode Shift?

I don't think it is, but external software might help.

...have you ever looking for communities about groups for people with disabilities? There might not be huge communities, but it sounds like the kind of niche and technical stuff where you can find real experts on the topic just roaming the subreddits and helping people (had experiences like that with lots of small communities).

Good luck!

Thank you, I've just updated the post with a work in progress scheme for Adventure Mode, if you'd like to try it out, details of where to find it in the community layouts, and how it works are in the post-response.

In fairness it is very functional enough to work. Pictures below..
